Basic outlines

- The collected data about the Roma communities in Europe are insufficient and rarely met
- The majority of the reviewed materials are reports and action plans for HIV prevention work among migrants (with African origin) in Europe

Basic outlines

- The collected data about the Roma in Europe, particularly in Central and Eastern Europe, shows the vulnerability of this community to HIV transmission and the lack of interventions in this field

Recommendations

- There is a need for standardisation across studies, across countries, and across different migrant populations (migrants recently arriving and/or in transit, established ethnic minority communities).
- More research is needed to develop accurate indicators related to mobility and migration status.
- Models of good practice should be developed on the basis of an analysis of studies carried out among migrants and ethnic minorities
